

Creating a Culture of Nonviolence

Presented by Educators for Nonviolence

WHAT IS NONVIOLENCE?

How can it help me have a more peaceful classroom?

How can it improve my teaching and my life?

How can I teach it to my students?

JULY 20-21 2007

FRIDAY (7pm-9:30pm) & SATURDAY (8am-6pm)

at the University of California, Berkeley

Dr. Michael Nagler is cofounder and Board President of the Metta Center for Nonviolence Education. He is professor emeritus of Classics and Comparative Literature at UC Berkeley, where he founded the Peace and Conflict Studies Program.

Dr. Rachel M. MacNair is the Director of the Institute for Integrated Social Analysis and author of several books, including Gaining Mind of Peace: Why Violence Happens and how to Stop It and History Shows: Winning with Nonviolent Action.

Dr. Joseph E. Marshall, Jr. is founder and Executive Director of the Omega Boys Club/Street Soldiers, a youth development and violence prevention organization headquartered in San Francisco, CA that emphasizes academic achievement and non-involvement with drugs.

Azim Khamisa founded the Tariq Khamisa Foundation after the tragic death of his son, Tariq. The Foundation is dedicated to breaking the epidemic of youth violence.

Jack DuVall is the President and founding Director of the International Center on Nonviolent Conflict. He was Executive Producer of the two-part Emmy-nominated PBS television series, A Force More Powerful, and co-author of its companion book.

Register online today at EFNV.ORG

email conference@efnv.org, or call 510-548-5550

Register today!

Teachers—One continuing education unit available thru UC Berkeley Extension

Our mission is to make the teaching and living of nonviolence part of mainstream education